Learning to Hear the Sung Mass: Part VI – Learning to Listen

If these articles have had a single purpose, it has been to encourage us to hear the Sung Mass with fresh ears.

Many newcomers arrive with an excellent hand missal and one pressing question: "How do I keep up?" Perhaps there is a better question to ask: "How does the Church want me to pray?"

At times the answer will be to follow the prayers closely in the missal. At others, it will be to watch the sacred ceremonies unfold. But there are moments when the liturgy asks something else of us: to listen.

This is not the passive listening of a concert audience. It is a prayerful listening, in which the Church's own contemplation of Scripture becomes our own. As Pope Benedict XVI reminded the monks of Heiligenkreuz in 2007, in the liturgy "we stand before God – he speaks to us and we speak to him."

Here lies one of the great gifts of the Proper chants. They remind us that the liturgy is neither a collection of texts to be understood nor a sequence of ceremonies to be observed, but an encounter with Christ through the prayer of His Church.

The choir, then, does not sing instead of the congregation, nor does it perform for the congregation. It exercises a genuine liturgical ministry, giving voice to prayers that belong to the whole Church. Through the choir, the Scriptures appointed for the day are not only proclaimed but contemplated.

This may change how we prepare for Mass. Rather than trying to read every text as it is sung, we might read the Propers beforehand, so that when we hear them, the melodies can deepen words we already know.

St Augustine is often credited with saying, "He who sings prays twice." Whatever the origin of those famous words, Gregorian chant points to a deeper truth: at times, the Church prays for us. She takes the inspired words of Scripture, clothes them in melodies shaped by centuries of contemplation, and sings them before God. Our task is not always to analyse every phrase, but to enter that prayer with attentive hearts.

In the end, the Proper chants are treasures not because they are ancient, but because they still teach the Church how to pray.
